August, 2016...
Area schools and colleges are opening soon! We welcome long-time friends of the church, Dr. Patricia Marks, Luana Goodwin and Dennis Bogyo back in August, and Dr. Cristobal Serran-Pagan speaks again at the end of the month. We also welcome new speaker, Dr. Elvan Aktas! Enjoy the last few days of summer and join us when you can.

Mission Statement
The Unitarian Universalist Church of Valdosta is committed to building a community of acceptance and love, where all people may strive for intellectual, moral, and spiritual enlightenment. We offer a place to celebrate life’s passages and to join in social action on behalf of local and global communities.
Sunday, Aug. 7 – Dr. Patricia Marks, “Belva Lockwood: A Vision of Courage”

What does it take to overcome prejudice against social class and gender? Belva Lockwood, the first woman attorney to practice before the Supreme Court and the first woman to complete presidential races in 1884 and 1888, is one of those who paved the way by disrupting the status quo. As a farmer’s daughter, widow, and woman, Lockwood faced endless criticism, especially from satirical magazines, where jokes abounded about “petticoat rule” and where she was depicted as an inept “Mother Hubbard.” Lockwood persisted in her campaign despite overwhelming odds, becoming a model for those who stand for equal rights.

Dr. Patricia Marks, retired English Professor and Episcopal Deacon, has published widely on 19th century satirical periodicals. Her article “Belva Lockwood and the Mother Hubbard Dress: Social, Moral, and Political Overtones in the Popular Press” will appear in the Fall Issue of Journal of American Culture.

Bridging Ceremony – today’s service will include a UU Bridging Ceremony. A Bridging Ceremony is a time to recognize and congratulate young people who have graduated from high school and to wish them well as they move on to the next stages of their life’s journey. Our graduates this year are: Patrick Richardson, Emmilee Bailey, and Teagan Dunn. We wish them all well!

Sunday, Aug. 14 – Luana Goodwin and Dennis Bogyo, “Taoist Tai Chi”

Dennis and Luana, certified volunteer instructors, will tell us about the Taoist Tai Chi Society, which meets at the UU Church of Valdosta. The society was “founded to preserve and promote the Taoist tradition of the dual cultivation of body and mind.” More info: http://www.taoist.org/

Dr. Dennis Bogyo is Professor Emeritus, VSU Department of Biology. Luana Goodwin is an artist and sculptor, who created the piece that now serves as our chalice. Welcome Dennis and Luana back to visit with us!

Sunday, Aug. 21 – Dr. Elvan Aktas, “Interfaith Dialogue in Our Community.”

Dr. Aktas will speak about his efforts to promote interfaith dialogue among various religious groups in the southeast.

Elvan Aktas was born in Ankara, Turkey in 1972. He graduated from Bilkent University in 1995 with a B.S. degree in Business Administration, and from the University of Florida with a Ph.D. In 2007, he joined the faculty of Langdale College of Business Administration at Valdosta State University, where he was recently was promoted to full professor. He has been teaching corporate and investment finance classes at undergraduate and graduate levels. Dr. Aktas has been conducting research in Derivative Securities, US Treasury Securities, Financial Institutions, and International Financial Markets. He is married to Sevil Aktas and he has two sons, ages 15 and 17.

Elvan Aktas is also an advisor to several non-profit cultural organizations throughout the Southeast, for whom he volunteers in cultural and interfaith dialogue activities to promote mutual understanding, harmony and tolerance in our diverse community.

Share the Plate Sunday: Share the Plate Sunday Offering: Our contributions this month will go to Hopes and Dreams Riding Facility, Inc., near Quitman, GA, which offers therapeutic services for veterans and their families, through horseback riding, camping, fishing, and other activities. The mission statement includes “to restore peace to their lives and heal the battle wounds that can’t be seen.” Hopes and Dreams has recently begun a building fund to increase capacity to serve veterans. http://www.hopesanddreamsridingfacility.com

In this talk, Dr. Serran-Pagan will address the spirituality of action practiced by Merton and Nhat Hanh in their respective faith communities. One was a Catholic monk, the other was a Buddhist monk. Yet both called each other spiritual brothers.

President’s Corner – August 2016
Dr. Tom Aiello

August is, for many of us, a month of starting over. School starts again or, perhaps more importantly, football starts again. With the kind of summer that we’ve seen unfold on television this summer, one filled with violence and controversy and terrorism and race debates, we might think that starting over is exactly what is necessary.

But it isn’t. We live in a world that has always had violence and controversy and terrorism and race debates. Take, for example, the summer of 1927. A frustrated member of the Bath Township, Michigan school board was bitter and angry about losing a local election. In response, in May, he detonated a bomb at the local elementary school, killing thirty-eight children, six adults, and injuring dozens of others. At the same time that the massacre was playing out in Michigan, Queens housewife Ruth Snyder was on trial for murdering her husband with the aid of her lover. The case was a national cause celeb because it gave opponents of women’s rights a platform to denounce their equality. Ultimately, because of those debates, Snyder became the first woman executed at Sing Sing in the twentieth century, the governor refusing clemency because women had to suffer equal punishment for their crimes.

Also during Snyder’s trial, a black man, John Carter of Little Rock, Arkansas, was lynched, hung from a telephone pole after being accused of raping a white woman. The lynching came less than a week after a local black janitor had been arrested for killing a young white girl and barely avoided the lynch rope after being secreted away to another county’s jail. After Carter’s lynching, thousands of white residents of Little Rock rioted, burning Carter’s body and attacking black neighborhoods. But that wasn’t the only race riot that month. Another was led by the Ku Klux Klan at a Memorial Day parade in New York City. (Among the Klansmen arrested for attacking police at that event was Donald Trump’s father, who was either a member of the group or a sympathizer with the cause.)

All of these events received national attention, all met with horror and outrage. All of them occurred within the span of a month in 1927. If we take nothing else away from these stories, we should understand that violence and controversy and terrorism and race debates are nothing new. They aren’t going to stop. There is no magical page to turn to make them go away. And so as we enter a month of change, let us not create false expectations of the world around us. Let us instead better respond with compassion and context and mindfulness that though we cannot make violence and controversy and terrorism and race debates disappear with the turn of a page, our responses to them can help make the kind of incremental progress that improves the lives of others and reminds us that, despite the problems surrounding us, new school terms and new football seasons are luxuries that much of the world will not see this year.

In memory of the many victims of violence over the past few weeks, both here in the U.S. and abroad.

Rev. Anna Hall spoke at the service on July 24\textsuperscript{th}, bringing the metaphor of the aftermath of “Earthquakes” as a way to think about how to deal with the tragedies around us, seemingly on a daily basis, recently. She encouraged us to consider new ways of listening as a way to go on after such tragedies—like rescuers seeking survivors of an actual earthquake: new ways of listening to those around us, moving through, and moving forward out of the tragedies that rock our world.

(Worship Team)

Each Sunday, there will be a sign-up sheet on the table at the back of the sanctuary for sign up for the upcoming services. You can also send an e-mail to Carol Stiles and she will put you on the list for that task.
